

DRAGGED INTO HISTORY
PRESENTS

THE HISTORY OF LGBTQ+ HISTORY MONTH

WRITTEN BY VAS L. WOJTANOWICZ
ILLUSTRATION BY LEAFEE.STUDIO

In the United States, during October, spooky things aren't the only ones coming out!

In 1988, Robert Eichberg and Jean O'Leary inaugurated National Coming Out Day (NCOD) as a positive way to celebrate LGBTQ+ folks living open and honest lives.

LGBTQ+ History Month in the United States coincides with NCOD.

In 1994, Rodney Wilson, came out to his students as part of a lesson about the Nazi oppression of Gay folks. After that fateful moment, he decided it wasn't right for Lesbian and Gay history to be excluded from textbooks. He conceived Lesbian and Gay History Month, as a way to bring visibility to the community's contribution to the historical record. This celebration spread globally and eventually evolved into LGBTQ+ History Month.

Sources: HRC, PBS News, NPR, St Louis On Air, Wikipedia

DRAGGED INTO HISTORY
PRESENTS

THE HISTORY OF LGBTQ+ HISTORY MONTH

WRITTEN BY VAS L. WOJTANOWICZ
ILLUSTRATION BY LEAFEE.STUDIO

In the United States, during October, spooky things aren't the only ones coming out!

In 1988, Robert Eichberg and Jean O'Leary inaugurated National Coming Out Day (NCOD) as a positive way to celebrate LGBTQ+ folks living open and honest lives.

LGBTQ+ History Month in the United States coincides with NCOD.

In 1994, Rodney Wilson, came out to his students as part of a lesson about the Nazi oppression of Gay folks. After that fateful moment, he decided it wasn't right for Lesbian and Gay history to be excluded from textbooks. He conceived Lesbian and Gay History Month, as a way to bring visibility to the community's contribution to the historical record. This celebration spread globally and eventually evolved into LGBTQ+ History Month.

Sources: HRC, PBS News, NPR, St Louis On Air, Wikipedia